

Saga of The Ferrets – 4th to 5th March 2014

Not strictly a Neighbourhood Watch issue but I have received two reports of a Ferret on the loose in the Coach Road area. It appears quite tame and so it may be that someone knows of a missing pet. If you can help identify the owner, please let me know.

Grahame

The ferret was outside my house in Tile House Lane last night. I took it to Penrose, the vet in Severalls Lane, as it was at risk of being run over. He appeared to be in good health but they were keeping him under observation in the animal hospital. If he is not claimed he will go to a rescue centre.

Laraine

This was in Coach Road at 8.5 am on Tuesday, causing motor cars to stop and wait to prevent the animal from being crushed. It appears to love to be around the tyres of cars.

Ray (Perhaps it is Tyred of living)

They are Jims who lives in the cottages in Tile House, they are now home safe thank you.

Emma

Thanks. I'll make contact with the person that told me it was all sorted.

Grahame

Seems not. The one that started this is still with the Vets. Can you ask Jim if he is still missing one.

Grahame

Hi, I just phoned jim and he knew about the ferret in the vets, just not sure if its his, he will pop in tomorrow.

Emma

The ferret(s) are back home and tucked up for the night. Thanks to those residents who assisted and provided information. Grahame

I think that ferret is really a schizophrenic squirrel, and went after the wrong type of nuts! A tucked up ferret, what a thought.... :)
